Based on non-authorial manuscript evidence, Rusk surmised that this note was an afterthought to a letter of Feb. 15, 1839. However Hudspeth gives "Fall 1845" based on Mrs. Brown's moving into the house mentioned in September 1845 (1:277).

Note is dated "Thursday p.m."

Rusk conjectures 1841 and a date "only a little earlier than June 21," making the closest Thursday June 17, a date when RWE was in Boston. Tilton therefore favors June 3; see Letters 7:454n.

"Our third happiness was the arrival of a certain young unknown Friend named Emerson from Boston in the United States, who turned aside far from his British, French and Italian travels, to see me here! He had an introduction from Mill and a Frenchman (Baron d'Eichthal's nephew) whom John knew in Rome. Of course we could do no other than welcome him; the rather as he seemed to be one of the most loveable creatures in himself we had ever looked on. He staid till next day with us, and talked and heard talk to his heart's content, and left us all really sad to part with him."
