Custodial History

The Charles Weidman School for Modern Dance, Inc. Records were donated to the Jerome Robbins Dance Division in 1998 by Linda Mann Reed.

Processing Information

The collection was processed and cataloged in 2006.

Historical Note

The Charles Weidman School of Modern Dance Inc., a non-profit organization was established on July 28, 1969, from a donation by Nik Vanoff a one-time member of the Weidman Theatre Dance Company. The organization combined the already established Theatre Dance Company and Expression of Two Arts (with calligraphist and sculptor, Mikhail Santaro). Weidman became the artistic director of the newly created organization. Linda Mann Reed became the Executive Vice President.

In 1972 the name was changed to the Charles Weidman Foundation. This was done to help secure more grant funding. The rationale being that "schools" are not easily funded.

During the early 1970s, the foundation, as it was commonly referred to, was ambitiously working to revive and preserve, through film and notation, dances from the Humphrey/Weidman era as well as Weidman's solo work of the 1950s and 1960s.

Weidman died on July 15, 1975, however The Charles Weidman Dance Foundation, continued staging pieces by Doris Humphrey and preserving Weidman's choreographic legacy into the mid-1980s.

Scope and Content Note

The collection contains material primarily relates to the Charles Weidman School for Modern Dance Inc. and runs from the early 1960s through his death in 1975. A large portion of the material is financial records for the company. Also included are programs, clippings, posters and photographs of Weidman and his company. Correspondence is limited and includes both personal and business-related information.

There is also material concerning Weidman's collaboration with the artist Mikhail Santaro.

The collection does not include any information about Weidman's time with Denishawn nor with his dance partner Doris Humphrey. There is very little personal material included.
