Abstract:	Erich Fromm (1900-1980) was a psychoanalyst, author, educator, and social philosopher. The papers reflect Fromm's career as author, psychoanalyst, scholar, educator, and social philosopher and document his academic associations and activities, his writings and research at the International Institute for Social Research, and to a lesser extent at Sarah Lawrence College; his theoretical contributions to psychology, sociology, social psychology, and psychoanalysis; and his relationship with notable American scholars who were influenced by his work

Note on Provenance and Restrictions

The Erich Fromm Papers were donated to the New York Public Library in March of 1957 by Mrs. Anya Blauner, a friend and colleague of Dr. Fromm, who acting on his behalf placed them in the Library for safekeeping with the stipulation that they would remain closed to researchers for a period of thirty years, or until March of 1987. During Dr. Fromm's lifetime the papers were made available to researchers only with his written consent. Since the expiration of the thirty year restriction, the papers continued under restriction pending the conclusion of an agreement between the Library and Dr. Fromm's literary executor Dr. Rainer Funk who had established the Erich Fromm Archives at Tübingen, Germany. Following the conclusion of the agreement in 1989 the Erich Fromm Papers housed in the Manuscripts and Archives Division have been open to all qualified scholars and researchers with the exception of certain papers described below.

During the accessioning of the collection it became evident that certain papers merited a period of restriction much longer than thirty years in order to protect the privacy of those involved. These papers which involve the confidentiality of the therapist-patient relationship consist of correspondence of Dr. Fromm with his patients and also records of their dreams which they recorded for his interpretation. Having been alerted as to the existence of these sensitive papers Dr. Fromm cautioned against their being made available to the public until he had had an opportunity to examine them. However, he was unable to accomplish this before his death in 1980. The Library has therefore removed the sensitive papers from the files and placed them in separate containers which are to remain sealed until the year 2049.

Biographical Note

Erich Fromm (1900-1980), psychoanalyst, author, educator and social philosopher, was born in Frankfurt, Germany, the son of Naphtali Fromm, a wine merchant, and Rosa (Krause) Fromm. Although raised in the Jewish faith, Fromm while still young abandoned Judaism for what was to become in his writings a humanistic ethic based upon love. In 1914 he declared himself a pacifist. After graduating from Heidelberg with a doctorate in sociology he continued his studies at Munich and at the Psychoanalytic Institute at Berlin. By his late twenties Fromm had become a practicing psychoanalyst and had established himself as lecturer in psychoanalysis and in social psychology at the University of Frankfurt's Psychoanalytic Institute and at its Institute for Social Research. While at Frankfurt he began his investigation into the mentality of the German worker under the Weimar Republic, work which he was to continue in New York. In 1932, suffering from ill health, Fromm resigned his lectureships at Frankfurt and repaired to Switzerland where he recuperated and became associated with the Institute for Social Research at Geneva, editing and writing articles for its journal. In 1933 he visited the United States during which time he sought (unsuccessfully) to negotiate the transfer of the Institute to the University of Chicago. The following year he emigrated to the United States, settled in New York City and continued his employment with the International Institute for Social Research, which, under the directorship of Dr. Max Horkheimer, had found a home on the campus of Columbia University. In 1941 Fromm became a naturalized American citizen.

Until his resignation in 1939 Fromm was employed at the Institute, lecturing, writing for its journal, helping to complete its study Die Autorität in der Familie which was published in 1936, and finishing the manuscript of his study of the German worker. During this time he also continued to practice psychoanalysis, saw many patients (several of whom were academic colleagues), participated in a study on authority and the family at Sarah Lawrence College, and completed the manuscript of Escape from Freedom (1941). The book won him broad public acclaim and established his reputation as a social theorist of unusual brilliance and originality. The book was published (1942) in England under the title The Fear of Freedom.

As an analyst without a medical degree Fromm was not permitted to teach psychoanalysis on an equal basis with other faculty members at the Institute who were physicians. (For the same reason he was granted only honorary membership in the newly formed Association for the Advancement of Psychoanalysis.) This, combined with a dispute over pay and personal differences with Horkheimer, who failed to authorize the publication of his study of the German worker, led to his resignation from the Institute although he continued to lecture at Columbia through 1941.

During the war years Fromm taught at Bennington College in Vermont, and subsequently held teaching posts at numerous institutions including the William Alanson White Institute for Psychiatry, Psychoanalysis, and Psychology, the New School for Social Research, Yale University, the National Autonomous University of Mexico, Michigan State University, New York University, and the Mexican Institute for Psychoanalysis. Throughout much of the remainder of his life Fromm continued to publish and to edit works directed towards a broad reading public. Included among his many books which reached a wide audience are The Art of Loving (1956); Sigmund Freud's Mission: An Analysis of His Personality and Influence (1959); May Man Prevail? An Inquiry into the Facts and Fictions of Foreign Policy (1962); My Encounter with Marx and Freud (1962); The Nature of Man (1968); The Revolution of Hope: Toward a Humanized Technology (1968); The Anatomy of Human Destructiveness (1973); and To Have or To Be? (1976). His book The Sane Society (1955) was instrumental in the formation (1957) of SANE: A Citizens' Organization for a Sane World, which became a powerful advocate for ending nuclear testing and the arms race.

On March 18, 1980 Fromm died of a heart attack at Muralto, Switzerland. He was survived by his third wife, Annis Freeman Fromm whom he married on December 18, 1953. She died in September 1985. His first marriage (June 16, 1926) to Frieda Reichmann ended in divorce. His second marriage (July 24, 1944) to Henny Gurland ended with her death in 1952.

Scope and Content Note

The papers (1929-1980) reflect Fromm's career as author, psychoanalyst, scholar, educator and social philosopher mainly from the year 1932 until 1949, except for a hiatus for the years 1944-46 for which there are no papers other than a few miscellaneous financial papers. A few miscellaneous papers date back to 1929. For most of the period Fromm's life was centered in New York City. The papers provide substantial documentation of his academic associations and activities, his writings and his research at the International Institute for Social Research and to a lesser extent at Sarah Lawrence College; his theoretical contributions to the fields of psychology, sociology, social psychology, and psychoanalysis; and his relationships with notable American scholars who were influenced by his work including the sociologists Robert S. Lynd, Helen Lynd and David Riesman, and the anthropologists Margaret Mead and Ashley Montagu. His career as a practicing psychoanalyst is also documented, but as noted above the papers which involve the privacy and confidentiality of the therapist-patient relationship have been removed and sealed until the year 2049. His earlier career in Europe is touched upon by a smattering of papers relating to his university lectureships in Germany and to his sojourn in Switzerland in the summer and fall of 1932. There is relatively little documentation of his social and personal life outside of his career activities. The papers also reflect to some extent the plight of European Jews several of whom sought Fromm's aid in emigrating from Germany, France and Poland just before the outbreak of World War II. In sum the papers represent an indispensable source for scholars and others seeking to deepen their knowledge of Fromm, his life in America, and the impact of his ideas upon the social sciences.

Series Descriptions

SERIES I. CORRESPONDENCE (CONTAINERS #1-3)

The correspondence which is in English and German is arranged alphabetically by personal name or organizational title into two subseries. Subseries "A" contains correspondence in the period 1932-43; and subseries "B" in the period 1947-49. The arrangement is chronological within the name or title. Some files contain collateral papers in addition to correspondence. No correspondence is present for the period 1944-46. The correspondence is both in-coming and out-going, the latter in the form of typed carbon copies. Filed at the end of each subseries are a few unidentified letters. The correspondents are listed in the Alphabetical Index of Correspondents following the container list.

The correspondence reflects mainly the period when Fromm was residing in New York and in Bennington, Vermont. His correspondents include professional and academic colleagues, psychologists, psychoanalysts, anthropologists, sociologists, university professors, physicians, editors of scholarly journals, publishers, refugees, refugee aid organizations, graduate students and others. There is some family correspondence filed under "Fromm Family". The correspondents are scattered in many countries including Bolivia, China, Czechoslovakia, England, France, Germany, Holland, Hungary, Latvia, Mexico, Poland, Soviet Union, Switzerland and Turkey. The correspondence relates to a variety of subjects from mundane matters of Fromm's personal life to his professional, scholarly, and academic interests, associations and relationships. Included is correspondence relating to the International Institute for Social Research, his books Escape from Freedom and Man for Himself, his scholarly articles and book reviews, matters of psychoanalytic theory and its implications for cultural analysis, the status of non-medical psychoanalysts, speaking engagements, conferences and seminars. Notable correspondents include Angelica Balabanoff, John Dollard, Max Horkheimer, Ernst Jones, Harold D. Lasswell, Paul Lazarsfeld, Helen Lynd, Robert Staughton Lynd, Margaret Mead, Ashley Montagu, Robert Redfield, Wilhelm Reich, David Riesman, Harry Stack Sullivan, and Carl August Wittfogel.

The Paul Lazarsfeld file contains textual criticisms by Lazarsfeld of Autorität in der Familie which Fromm was preparing for publication. Included in the Robert S. Lynd file is a letter by Fromm in which he inadvertently hits upon the title for his book Escape from Freedom. Included in the Margaret Mead file are two autograph letters written by her while she was en route to Bali and in which she announces her marriage to Gregory Bateson and mentions her colleagues Geoffrey Gorer and Helen Lynd. The correspondence also reveals her debt to Fromm for the concept of surplus in primitive societies. Included also are her notes on character formation which she submitted to Fromm for his comments. The Ashley Montagu file relates to Montagu's search for a university appointment in anthropology and to a proposed popular edition of Freud's writings. The Wilhelm Reich file relates in part to the methodology of mass psychology and to the use of psychology in sociology. The correspondence which is in German is addressed to Fromm at Davos and Lausanne, Switzerland. Included is a copy of a letter to Freud from Max Horkheimer requesting his advice on a replacement for Fromm who was too ill to continue his work at the Institute for Social Research (Frankfurt). The David Riesman file relates in part to Riesman's sociological research, his need to gain experience in interviewing techniques, and to his acceptance of a position as director of research for the Committee on National Policy at Yale. Included is a copy (1941) of a paper which Riesman gave at the Roundtable on Public Opinion and Propaganda of the American Political Science Association. The Carl A. Wittfogel file contains a lengthy letter (1936) from Wittfogel at Peking, China where he was conducting research on the Chinese family. Wittfogel acknowledges Fromm's influence on his own work. Fromm's reply contains a critique of Freud's theory of sublimation.

The correspondence relating to refugees is contained mainly in the files of Heinz Eduard Brandt, Peter Gluck, and Kurt Wertheim. The Brandt file concerns a cousin of Fromm's who sought to emigrate from Germany and to the plight of Mrs. Gertrude Brandt, in Posnan, Poland. The Gluck and Wertheim files relate to persons residing in France and Germany, respectively, who also sought Fromm's help in coming to the United States.

Included in the Fromm family correspondence is correspondence of Joseph Gurland, Fromm's brother-in-law relating to his search for employment as a chemical engineer.

Other noteworthy correspondence includes the Elizabeth G. Brown file which contains comments by Brown written from Moscow on the Purge Trials and her reflections on Soviet society; The Family (periodical) which contains a review by Fromm of Margaret Mead's Sex and Temperament... and correspondence relating to Autorität in der Familie as well as a review of it by Otto Fenichel; and the file Psychiatry (a quarterly published by the William Alanson White Psychiatric Foundation) which includes a copy of an address by Fromm given at a memorial meeting (1940) for Harry Stack Sullivan, and copy of his review of Sullivan's Conceptions of Modern Psychiatry.

SERIES 2. WRITINGS (CONTAINERS #4-9)

The writings are arranged into four subseries: subseries "A", Books by Fromm; subseries "B", Articles in English by Fromm; subseries "C", Articles in German by Fromm; and subseries "D", Writings by Others. Subseries "A" contains manuscript and typescript drafts of Chapters V, VI, VII, and VIII of Escape from Freedom (New York, Farrar & Rinehart, 1941); and drafts also in manuscript and typescript form of Man for Himself; An Inquiry into the Psychology of Ethics (New York and Toronto, Rinehart & Co., 1947). Neither work is complete in draft form. Chapter VII of Escape from Freedom is an early manuscript draft. The other chapters are in typescript. Included are manuscript notes by Fromm on the history of the concept of freedom. There are numerous incomplete drafts of chapters, sections, and parts of Man for Himself which illustrate the creative and editorial methods of the author. Many of the draft pages are in the form of manuscript emendations to a typewritten text. The text and pagination are frequently unclear or illegible and most of the drafts have numerous gaps in the texts and pagination. There are also numerous unsorted pages and fragments of texts present. There are, in addition, numerous notes and textual criticisms of portions of the manuscript in the hand of Patrick Mullahy whom Fromm acknowledged in the foreword of the book as having aided in the preparation of the manuscript.

Subseries "B" and "C" contain manuscript and typescript drafts of miscellaneous articles by Fromm which are arranged by title and which are listed on the container list. Included is an autobiographical narrative (in German) describing Fromm's stay at a sanitarium in Switzerland in 1932.

Subseries "D" contains miscellaneous writings in the field of psychology by other persons many of whom were colleagues of Dr. Fromm's. These are listed on the container list.

SERIES 3. INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE FOR SOCIAL RESEARCH (CONTAINERS #10-15)

This series consisting of two subseries contains manuscripts and collateral papers relating to Die Autorität in der Familie (subseries "A"); and The German Workers under the Weimar Republic (subseries "B"), two studies which Fromm was preparing for publication during the time of his employment at the International Institute for Social Research. Included is a typescript draft in German with corrections and emendations of Die Autorität in der Familie representing the fifth volume of research reports of the Institute for which Fromm contributed a section on the psychological aspects of authority and the family from the standpoint of Freudian theory. Included are bibliography, notes, and typed transcript copies of questionnaires in French and German which were utilized in the study and which were returned by respondents (judges, teachers and social workers) residing in Austria, Belgium, France, Holland and Switzerland in the period 1933-34.

Subseries "B" contains typescript drafts (in English) of Chapters I, II, III, IV and Appendix of The German Workers under the Weimar Republic which was the working title of a study which Fromm had begun in Germany and which he completed in New York. Although never published by the Institute the study was subsequently published in English and German language editions (The Working Class in Weimar Germany: A Psychological and Sociological Study, translated by Barbara Weinberger and edited by Wolfgang Bonss (Leamington Spa, Warwickshire, Berg Publishers, ca.1984); and Arbeiter und Angestellte am Vorabend des Dritten Reiches .bearbeitet und herausgegeben von Wolfgang Bonss (Stuttgart, Deutsche Verlags-Anstalt, c1980). There are also unsorted fragments of drafts in German. Included is a large mass of tabulations of the results of the questionnaires which were used in the study. The questionnaires were returned in the period 1929-1931 by German workers in Berlin, Cologne, Frankfurt, Leipzig, Munich and in other cities in Germany. The tabulations, which are arranged in numerical sequence, contain typewritten responses in German to numerically coded questions. Each numbered unit in the numerical sequence which runs from #3-#602 (with gaps) consists of five to seven pages in original typescript form. The tabulations are contained on extremely brittle, legal-size note paper which is deteriorating badly. In many instances portions of the text of the tabulations near the margins have disintegrated entirely.
