Creator History

Afrekete was conceived by Catherine McKinley, a writer and L. Joyce Delaney, a screenwriter and independent videomaker. The two met as undergraduates at Sarah Lawrence College. This anthology, published in the mid-1990s, was to fill a perceived gap within African American and lesbian and gay writing. In other words, to give a voice to Black Lesbian writers. The final book contained twenty essays in verse and prose on a variety of subjects and themes.

Scope and Content Note

The Afrekete records is a small collection comprised primarily of publishing-related documents. These consist of press and publicity files, correspondence with editors and authors, permissions, and marketing files. There is also a rough draft of the book with markup as well as edited submissions from accepted authors.

Published copies of the book are available at the Schomburg Center and the Schwarzman Building.

Arrangement: Collection is arranged alphabetically by type of document.
