Description The American Fund for Public Service, Inc., known also as the Garland Fund, was created in 1922 when Charles Garland, son of a Boston millionaire, received his inheritance and decided it use it in support of radical social and economic causes. The endowment of 850,000 dollars was administered by a board of directors chosen from among the most prominent leaders of the labor movement, the Socialist and Communist parties, and civil rights and minority groups. At various times the board included Norman Thomas, Roger Baldwin, Elizabeth Gurley Flynn, James Weldon Johnson, Sidney Hillman, William Z. Foster, Freda Kirchwey, Robert Morss Lovett, Judah Magnes, and Scott Nearing. During its life the Fund gave nearly two million dollars to a variety of left-wing organizations and enterprises including labor unions, cooperatives, schools for workers, radical publications, bail and legal defense funds, and civil liberties, penal reform, and minority rights groups. Nearly every progressive group active between 1922 and 1941 is represented among the Fund's applicants. Among them are the American Civil Liberties Union, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, American Birth Control League, the Brookwood, Commonwealth, and Manumit Labor Colleges, the Rand School of Social Science, the League for Industrial Democracy, such publications as The Daily Worker, New Masses, Liberator, Il Martello, the publishing house, Vanguard Press (which the Fund created), labor unions such as the United Mine Workers, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Southern Tenant Farmers Union, and defense committees for the Scottsboro Boys, Sacco & Vanzetti, and Tom Mooney.

The records of the American Fund (1922-41) include internal and external correspondence of members of its board of directors, treasurer, and legal counsel (1922-41); board of directors meeting minutes (1922-41); several committee reports & surveys (1923-39) memoranda and reports on policy (1922-32); auditor's reports (1922-41); lists of appropriations and loans (1922-41); and application files for each individual or organization requesting assistance. [The Fund's published reports on its activities can be found in the General Research Division of the N.Y.P.L.]

The grant and loan application files account for 70% of the collection. These files contain the correspondence of the applicant with the Fund and often a variety of supporting materials such as reports, memoranda, publications, financial records, leaflets, as well as comments by Fund officials regarding the application. The application files are divided into two basic series, Applications Accepted and Applications Refused. Each series is further divided into four time periods: 1922-27; 1928-33; 1934-38; 1939-41. The files of Applications Refused are arranged alphabetically by the name of the applicant for each of the four time periods. In the Applications Accepted series, the files for each time period (except 1934-38) are separated into two subseries, Gifts and Loans, each with its own alphabetical arrangement.

Researchers should note the following ideosyncracies of this collection:

1. There are several mistakes in alphabetization of files which have not been altered in order to preserve the original numbering of the files.
2. Correspondence regarding loans which were eventually cancelled can often be found in the subseries Gifts.
3. The chronological periods into which files are divided indicate the years during which an appropriation was made or a loan repaid or cancelled. In many cases the correspondence in the files extends beyond the limits of the period indicated.
4. Obsolete volume and file numbers have not been removed from the documents. Please refer to current box and file listings.
5. Reports from grantees which were too lengthy to be included in the application files can be found at the end of the Applications Approved series.
