Biography/History

Leonard Feist, publisher and copyright expert, was the son of a ladies' corset salesman and a part-time songwriter, turned music publisher. After graduating from Yale in 1932, Feist joined his father's company. When, Leo Feist, Inc. was sold to MGM in the late 1930's, Feist began a career as an independent publisher. On December 6, 1937, Feist married Mary Regensburg, a well-known New York City interior designer, with whom he had two daughters--Linda and Betsy.

During his career as a music publisher, Feist was involved in the publication of concert, educational and sacred music. He was the first American publisher of Igor Stravinsky, and also represented Paul Hindemith and Arnold Schoenberg in the United States and published the works of ten Pulitzer Prize winners. In 1956, he assumed the presidency of Associated Music Publishers, Inc, and in 1966, he became president of the National Music Publishers' Association.

Feist became known for his work in Washington, D.C as an advocate on behalf of the music publishing industry. His first successful foray into legislative activity occurred in the early 1950s when he successfully supported the inclusion of printed material under the U.S. Postal Services "book rates." He worked extensively in helping to draft the 1976 U.S. Copyright Act. Feist was instrumental in shaping various other provisions of the new law that impact music publishing. As a well-regarded expert on international copyright, Feist served as an advisor to the United States Delegation to the Berne Convention Revision Conference to advising on revisions of international copyright in 1971 and on other previous occasions. In 1980, he published, An Introduction to Popular Music Publishing in America, which illustrates publishers' role in the music business.

Throughout his professional life, Feist was an integral part of the leadership in a number of organizations. He served as President of the National Music Council, President of the Century Music Publishing, President of Mecury Music Corporation and Vice-President of the National Academy of Popular Music (which sponsors the Songwriters Hall of Fame). Feist was the recipient of many awards including the Degree of Honorary Doctor of Music conferred by the Peabody Institute of Music.

Scope and Content Note

The majority of the collection consists of Leonard Feist's professional papers relating to his work in copyright law. The few personal papers in the collection are located in the Family Papers series, which also includes the papers of Feist's father, Leo Feist, and his brother, Milton Feist.
