Scope and Content Note

Broadside was an inexpensive format consisting of a single sheet of lyrics meant for mass publication. This collection consists of approximately 2600 broadsides published in the United States between 1850 and the early 1900s on a variety of topics. The broadside texts were intended to be sung to existing, widely-known melodies and do not contain musical notation.

Content warning: Folder titles were transcribed from the items themselves, many of which contain racist language and attitudes common in the United States in the nineteenth century.

Arrangement: The collection is arranged into two series: Broadside with anonymous authors, and Broadsides with known authors. The Broadsides with anonymous authors series is arranged alphabetically by title. The Broadsides with known authors series is arranged alphabetically by author, and then by title.
