Creator History

Joseph Schillinger (1895-1943) was a Russian born, American music theorist and composer.

He studied design, music, mathematics, physics, drama, art, dance, history, language, and electrical engineering, as well as four years of classical music studies and composition at the University of St. Petersburg. Upon graduation, he was appointed professor of music at the Kharkov Institute of Music.

He also served as professor of the history of the arts at St. Petersburg and organized the first jazz band in Russia.

He came to America in 1928, and became a naturalized citizen in 1936. Schillinger taught music, mathematics, art history, and his own system of strict mathematical composition at the New School for Social Research, at New York University and also at Columbia University Teacher's College.

Among his many students were: Tommy Dorsey, Vernon Duke, George Gershwin, Benny Goodman, and Oscar Levant.
