Creator History

Since its founding in 1964, Trinity Repertory Company (TRC) has been considered one of the most respected regional theaters in the country. Adrian Hall led the company as Artistic Director until 1989 and transformed it from a small community theater to a nationally prominent resident theater. Now under the leadership of Artistic Director Oskar Eustis and Managing Director Edgar Dobie, TRC presents a balance of world premiere, contemporary, and classic works, including seven major productions, an annual production of A Christmas Carol, and Trinity Summer Shakespeare, for a total annual audience of over 200,000.

Local, national, and international recognition has come to TRC consistently. In 1968, it was the first American theater company to perform at the Edinburgh International Festival in Scotland. The company received the Tony Award for Outstanding Regional Theater Company in 1981, produced four television productions for PBS, and toured India and Syria.

TRC has a strong commitment to the development of new works and has presented nearly 50 world premieres. Artistic Director Eustis has a national reputation as both a director and dramaturg; he commissioned Tony Kushner's Tony Award- and Pulitzer Prize-winning Angels in America. Trinity's Providence New Plays Festival has presented some of the theater's newest voices to New England audiences. Summer finds TRC actors gathering with playwrights and directors at the Bread Loaf Writer's Colony in Middlebury, Vermont, to write, rehearse, and present workshops of new plays.

From its roots in Providence's Trinity United Methodist Church, TRC moved in 1973 to its present home, the Lederer Theater Center in downtown Providence. Formerly known as the Majestic Theatre, the historic building houses two performance spaces: the 500-plus seat Elizabeth and Malcolm Chace Theater and the 300-seat Sarah and Joseph Dowling, Jr. Theater, as well as offices, production shops, rehearsal halls, and Conservatory studios.

As Rhode Island's largest arts organization, TRC has a significant impact on the community, and is a linchpin of Providence's arts and entertainment district. With an annual budget of $7 million, the theater employs 130 artistic and administrative staff, and generates more than $24 million in economic activity each year. The theater enjoys support from the region's leading corporations as well as the National Endowment for the Arts, the Rhode Island State Council on the Arts, The Rhode Island Committee for the Humanities, and the City of Providence. VI. Dallas Theatre Center (5 Cassettes)

Hall began his tenure as Artistic Director of the Dallas Theatre Center (DTC) in 1983. He served both TRC and DTC posts for throughout the 80's. With his managing director, Peter Donnelly, fresh from the Seattle Repertory Theater, Hall first addressed the most pressing physical needs of the theater: a renovation of the original Wright building to improve the backstage area, the basement floor facilities and the traffic flow; to find, or build a second playing house with wide open space to accommodate innovative productions; to develop broader audiences and to keep more actors working with simultaneous or overlapping play runs.

The new Arts District Theater, designed by Hall's associate, the distinguished stage designer, Eugene Lee, opened in 1985 and turned out to be an engaging metal barn which adapts to virtually any staging a director may devise. It is the most flexible performance facility in the country.

The idea of a permanent company was another major priority and Hall assembled DTC's company by bringing some people from Trinity Repertory, using some local actors and importing others. He opened with a brilliant production of Brecht's Galileo in the Kalita Humphreys Theater and, as soon as he could, staged his own adaptation of the Robert Penn Warren novel All the King's Men, which inaugurated most of the facilities the new Arts District house could provide. VII. American Repertory Theatre (4 Cassettes)

The American Repertory Theatre (A.R.T.) occupies a unique place in the American theatre. It is the only not-for-profit theatre in the country that maintains a resident acting company and an international training conservatory, and also an association with a major university. Over its twenty-two year history the A.R.T. has welcomed American and international theatre artists who have enriched the theatrical life of the whole nation. The theatre has garnered many of the nation's most distinguished awards, including a Pulitzer Prize and a Tony Award. Since 1980 the A.R.T. has performed in eighty-one cities in twenty-two states around the country, and worldwide in twenty-one cities in sixteen countries on four continents. It has presented one hundred and sixty productions, over half of which were premieres of new plays, translations, and adaptations.
