Title: Community International Corporation motion picture review scrapbooks

Date: 1915-1920

Size: 1.05 linear feet (3 boxes)

Abstract: The Community International Corporation was a film production company active in the early 20th century and headquartered in New York City. The Community International Corporation motion picture review scrapbooks contain reviews of early 20th century films distributed by Pathe, Goldwyn, Universal, Fox, Paramount, Triangle, Mutual, and numerous independent distribution companies. Reviews date from 1915 to 1920. The scrapbooks pages are arranged alphabetically by film title, and for some titles also include reel lists for the pictures as well as musical settings to cue piano players providing live accompaniment at the theater. Along with film title, scrapbook pages identify production company and distribution company names, as well as the film genre for each title
