Summary

Creator: Watt, Gregory, 1777-1804

Title: Gregory Watt manuscript material

Date: 1799

Size: 1 item

Abstract: Gregory Watt, son of James Watt, the Scots-born engineer and scientist. To Davies Giddy (later Davies Gilbert), scientific administrator and applied mathematician: 1 autograph letter signed: 4 Mar 1799: (MISC 4144): from Soho: begins, "I sit down with pleasure to reply to your last obliging letter of which I communicated the contents to my father in town who desires me to return you his best thanks for your obliging offer of medication with the Adventures in Wheal Crenver." Written on p. [2-3] of folded lettersheet, on p. [1] of which is printed a price list for "patent copying machines manufactured by James Watt & Co. ..."; docketed on p. 4, probably in Giddy's hand.

Access: Restricted access.

Preferred citation: Gregory Watt manuscript material: 1 item, Carl H. Pforzheimer Collection of Shelley and His Circle, The New York Public Library

Creator History
Gregory Watt, son of James Watt, the Scots-born engineer and scientist.

Scope and Content Note
To Davies Giddy (later Davies Gilbert), scientific administrator and applied mathematician: 1 autograph letter signed: 4 Mar 1799: (MISC 4144): from Soho: begins, "I sit down with pleasure to reply to your last obliging letter of which I communicated the contents to my father in town who desires me to return you his best thanks for your obliging offer of medication with the Adventures in Wheal Crenver." Written on p. [2-3] of folded lettersheet, on p. [1] of which is printed a price list for "patent copying machines manufactured by James Watt & Co. ..."; docketed on p. 4, probably in Giddy's hand.
Key Terms

Titles
Watt, Gregory : manuscript material

Names
Watt, Gregory, 1777-1804
Davies, Gilbert, 1767-1839
Watt, James, 1736-1819
James Watt and Company (Birmingham, England)