Creator History

The International Gay Information Center, Inc. was founded in 1982 for the purpose of collecting and preserving historical materials documenting the gay and lesbian history and culture.

Custodial History

The materials in this record group were culled from the personal papers and institutional records collected by the International Gay Information Center in the early 1980s. The provenance of these materials has not usually been documented, but in a few instances it has been possible to trace the origins of the materials. For example, one set of interviews is known to have been conducted by the historian John D'Emilio (subseries 1. 1), and the Intergay radio program originated at radio station WBAI (subseries 5. 1)

It is probable that many of the other materials originated with the organizations whose records are included in the IGIC collection. It is likely, for example, that audiotapes of radio shows on homosexuality dating from the 1950s came from the files of the Mattachine Society. However, such inferences about the provenance of the materials cannot be made with any certainty.

Scope and Content Note

These materials document the development of an underground gay subculture in the 1950s and 1960s, the emergence of the gay rights movement after the Stonewall Riots of 1969 and the evolution of gay and lesbian communities with their own distinct cultures in the 1970s and 1980s.

Information on the gay movement in the 1950s and 1960s is found primarily in the interviews, which also provide some data on the gay culture of the 1930s and 1940s. The interviews with Harry Hay and James Kepner (in subseries 1.1 and 1.3) are especially noteworthy for their extensive detailed recollections of gay culture in the decades prior to 1970. These sources mainly document developments in Los Angeles and San Francisco. There are also recordings of meetings (series 2.0) and radio talks shows (subseries 5.2) that document the internal developments in the gay movement and social attitudes towards homosexuality during this period.

The materials provide extensive data on the beginnings of the gay rights movement in the early 1970s. The interviews provide contemporary documentation on the development of a number of local gay organizations (in subseries 1.2) and include recollections from individuals who were active in the movement at a national level. There are also recordings of a few gay meetings from this period, such as the Rhode Island Gay Conference of 1974 (Series 2.0).

The materials provide the strongest documentation on the solidification of gay communities and the flowering of gay culture in the late 1970s and 1980s, particularly in the New York City area. The strengthening of gay identity and the evolution of a gay culture during this period is documented in the lectures on gay art and history (subseries 3.1, 3.2), gay radio shows (subseries 5.1, 5.2), and in recordings of gay music, gay comedy performances, and gay poetry readings (Series 4.0). The records of the IGIC (Series 6.0), which are a product of the community's effort to preserve a shared past, also provide evidence of the growing coherence of the gay community. The interviews, some of which are with gay performers (subseries 1.3), also chronicle the development of gay culture and the changing meaning of gay identity during this period.

These audio-visual materials also provide some information on other social movements that influenced or had contact with the gay rights movement, such as the civil rights movement, the black power movement, the feminist movement, and the Vietnam anti-war movement. There are scattered references to these movements in the interviews (Series 1.0), lectures (3.0), and radio and television programs (Series 5.0). The Open Channel Television Programs (subseries 5.3), which contain few references to gays, include programs created by several community groups in the New York area, which reflect the social movements of the early 1970s.

Container List

1. Interviews 1973-1983

Consists of interviews conducted in the 1970s and 1980s, most of which are with gay activists, members of gay organizations, and prominent figures in the gay community. These record the beginnings of the gay rights movement in the 1950s and 1960s, and document the development of gay organizations, communities and culture in the 1970s and 1980s. They also provide information on the changing significance of gay identity during these periods.

1.1 Interviews Conducted by John D'Emilio 1976-1979

Consists of oral history interviews conducted by John D'Emilio in the course of researching his book, Sexual Politics, Sexual Communities: The Making of a Homosexual Minority in the United States, 1940-1970. The interviews chronicle the development of an underground gay movement, particularly in San Francisco and Los Angeles, from the late 1940s to the late 1960s. They document the development of a number of early gay organizations such as the Gay Liberation Front, the League for Civil Education, the Student Homophile League, the Tavern Guild, the Society for Individual Rights, the Mattachine Society and One, Inc. The documentation on the last two organizations is especially strong, as a number of leaders from both organizations were interviewed.

The interviews also provide information about the involvement of gays in other organizations including the Communist Party, the Science Fiction Society, and Glide Memorial Church (in San Francisco). A few of the interviews also touch on the impact of the civil rights movement, the Vietnam anti-war movement and the Stonewall Riots on the gay movement. Most of the interviewees relate how they discovered and came to terms with their sexual orientation. These discussions document the changing meaning of gay identity over several decades. Of particular interest for this subject are the extended interviews with Harry Hay and James Kepner, which document gay life in the 1930s and 1940s. The persons for whom there are interviews in this subseries are as follows:

- 206008 Bill Beardemphl Interview 1976 November 26
Beardemphl, William E., 1927?-2002 (Interviewee)
An interview with William Beardemphl conducted John D'Emilio on November 26, 1976. Beardemphl discusses the Gay Rights Movement in the early 1960s, and describes meetings of the Mattachine Society and the Society for Individual Rights.
- 206048 Lisa Ben Interview 1977 January 9
Part 1 of an interview with Lisa Ben (a pseudonym) conducted by John D'Emilio on January 9, 1977. Ben describes her experiences as a lesbian folk musician, and performs the following songs: "The Fairy from Tulare", (a parody of Okee from Muskogee); "Crusin' Down the Boulevard"; "Frankie and Johnny;" "The Girl that I Marry".
- 206028 Gerard Brissette Interview 1876 November 1
An interview with Gerard Brissette conducted by John D'Emilio on November 11, 1976 in El Cerrito, California. Brissette describes his initial contact with the Mattachine Society; his acquaintance with Harry Hay; Hay's interest in anthropology and his desire to organize Mattachine as a secret society with different orders; conflict between left-wing and right-wing members of the Mattachine Society; and the role of women and church members in the Mattachine Society. He mentions Mattachine branches in Laguna Beach, San Diego, San Francisco, Hollywood, and Los Angeles. He also discusses David Finn [sp?], an employee of California Governor Pat Brown, who was suspected by some gay activists of being an FBI agent.
- 206001 Kenneth Burns Interview 1977 January 10
Part of an interview with Kenneth Burns conducted by John D'Emilio on January 10, 1977. Burns describes his involvement with the Mattachine Society at a time when it functioned as a secret society with different orders. He tells of attending certain Mattachine events, such as discussion groups and fundraisers. A portion of the interview appears to be missing.
- 206042 Hal Call Interview, pt. 1 1976 November 16
Part 1 of an interview with Harold (Hal) Call conducted by John D'Emilio on November 16, 1976. Call discusses his experiences in the gay movement, particularly in the Mattachine Society in California, during the years 1953-1956. He describes differences between gay activists in San Francisco and Los Angeles; his arrest in Chicago; the development of the constitution of the Mattachine Society; and the relationship between the Mattachine Society and the Society of American Friends.
