Creator History

Clarence Arthur "C. A." Tripp (1919-2003) was a psychologist and sex researcher closely affiliated with Alfred Kinsey. Tripp was born in Denton, Texas in 1919 and studied photography at the Rochester Institute of Technology. He was a staff member in the Eastman Kodak Company's research department before working on propaganda films for 20th Century Fox during World War II.

Tripp's interests began to shift to psychology and after the war, he traveled to Alfred Kinsey's Institute for Sex Research. Kinsey would serve as a mentor, collaborator, and friend until Kinsey's death. Tripp provided his photography skills to several of Kinsey's research studies on sexual behavior and other Kinsey Institute projects.

Tripp pursued formal education in psychology and received an undergraduate degree from the New School for Social Research in 1953 and a doctorate in clinical psychology from New York University in 1957. Tripp's dissertation and early professional work focused on graphology. He was affiliated with entrepreneur Huntington Hartford's Handwriting Institute in New York City from 1954 to 1964 (serving as its director) and he wrote and published on handwriting analysis. At the same time, Tripp opened a private practice and from 1955 to 1964 taught at the State University of New York, Downstate Medical Center. Interested in researching a number of psychological and physiological aspects of sexuality, Tripp formed Psychological Research Associates, Inc., in 1972 and served as its director.

Tripp's observations as a practicing psychologist and his analysis of data and research conducted by Kinsey and others informed his influential book The Homosexual Matrix (1975). This scholarly work sold half a million copies and provided a new research-based perspective on same sex attraction. He worked on revising the book and used his research to respond to and refute the claims of other researchers, most notably the work of Alan P. Bell, Martin S. Weinberg, and Sue Kiefer Hammersmith.

Much of Tripp's own research was predicated by Kinsey's groundbreaking work and Tripp repeatedly circled back to Kinsey's research. When James H. Jones published a biography of Kinsey in 1997, Tripp took issue with Jones' characterization of Kinsey and Kinsey's research and in response drafted a manuscript entitled Doors Behind Doors, Wheels Within Wheels.

Before his death in 2003, Tripp conducted extensive research into theories and speculations about Abraham Lincoln's sexuality and had finished an unpublished book-length manuscript. The research and Tripp's manuscript were published posthumously as The Intimate World of Abraham Lincoln in 2005.

Container List

Series I: Correspondence 1940s-2003 (3 boxes)

The correspondence provides insight into Tripp's working relationships with other psychologists, sex researchers, and professional acquaintances. The majority of the correspondence is between Tripp and Sixt Kapff (an Italian associate of both Tripp and Kinsey), Tripp and Kinsey, and Kapff and Kinsey. The letters between Tripp and Kinsey discuss details of their research collaborations and Kinsey's visits to New York City. In 1951 Kapff wrote to Kinsey expressing an interest in his sex research and Kapff began to provide Kinsey with data and information about his own sexual activities. Kapff provided Tripp with copies of this correspondence with Kinsey. Tripp and Kapff's own letters discuss Tripp's research and Kapff's observations about sexual practices and mores in Italy and India.

Other frequent correspondents include Professors David Gwyn Jeffreys and Wayne Dynes and Kinsey Institute director Paul Gebhard. There is also one file of correspondence with Theodore Reik. Tripp's early professional work at the Handwriting Institute is documented through correspondence, much of it with Huntington Hartford, founder of the Handwriting Institute.

Series III: Writing and Research 1952-2013 (33 boxes; 37 computer files (1.16 Megabytes))

Tripp's wide-ranging research interests are reflected in the Writing and Research series which contains material on the psychological and physiological aspects of human sexuality, with an emphasis on homosexuality; pedophilia; child abuse; and early sexual experiences among other topics. Tripp's research files primarily consist of printouts of typed notes and transcripts, summaries of secondary sources, and some data printouts; some are highlighted and annotated.

The bulk of the research subsection contains files that could not be associated with any particular research or writing project. The writings subsection pertains to Tripp's book length projects, research articles, and unpublished writings. For The Homosexual Matrix, The Intimate World of Abraham Lincoln, and Tripp's joint research with Fritz Fluckiger on the sexual substrate there are drafts, correspondence, and research files related to these discreet projects. The Lincoln-related files include drafts and correspondence generated after Tripp's death. A copy of Tripp's dissertation is also available (b. 24 f.2). There is also considerable material documenting Tripp's criticism of the Kinsey biography written by James H. Jones.
