Creator History

The Reverend George W. Bennett was born in Edenton, North Carolina in 1898. After finishing grade school Bennett began working as a laborer. A gambler and an excessive drinker, Bennett was arrested and charged with robbery twice. He was convicted and sentenced to thirty-five years in prison in 1932, following his second robbery arrest. After four and one half years in jail Bennett became increasingly interested in Christianity. He claimed to have had religious visions and believed he had undergone a spiritual rebirth. He was transferred to Dannemoria State Hospital for the criminally insane in 1937 once he told prison doctors of his religious experiences. Eleven years later, he was sent to Clinton prison where he worked as secretary for the Protestant chaplain. In 1955, having served twenty-three years of his sentence, Bennett was released from jail. Bennett was ordained by the Pentecostal Church and claimed to have established a church known as the King's Church of God; however no records exist regarding this church. While in prison, Bennett had begun writing of his life and his religious beliefs. He published three monographs: Life Behind the Walls of My Self-Made Fate(1964), an autobiography; The Meaning of Eternal Life(1966), and The Reality of God and the Interpretation of Being(1971), which were published by Vantage Press. Bennett lived in Brooklyn from 1974 until 1982. He is unlisted in New York City directories following this year. *Much of the information from this biographical note was drawn from George Bennett's autobiography, Life Behind the Walls of My Self-Made Fate.

Container List

b. 1 Chapters

The Chapters section begins with a list of chapters which appears to be the organization Bennett intended for his book. The folders following this list are arranged accordingly; most contain three drafts of each chapter, one handwritten, and two typewritten. Folders thirty-three to thirty-seven are drafts of chapters not mentioned in the chapter list. Because Bennett's intentions are unclear, these chapters are filed last.
