Biographical note

Mildred Warner Nunn was an amateur genealogist working from 1960 to 1962 who traced her descent from the first pastor of the Dutch Collegiate Church of New Amsterdam and from William Warner, who settled in Ipswich, Massachusetts in 1637.

Scope and content note

The Warner family genealogical research papers consist primarily of the notes and correspondence generated by Mildred Warner Nunn in the course of tracing her family's lineage, as well as an assortment of collected family papers dating from 1633 to 1920. Genealogical research includes a master chart tracing the ways in which the primary families are related, as well as files on individual family lines of Arrowsmith, Longstreet, Messler, Nunn, Shumate and Warner. The collection also contains a small amount of research by Nunn's grandfather, Leonard W. Warner (1834-1913). The family papers include 17th, 18th and 19th century documents, some in Dutch. The papers are primarily legal including wills and land grants; many are related to the Bogardus/Trinity Church land dispute beginning in the 1830s. There is also a scrapbook containing family memorabilia from the 19th and early 20th century compiled by Mildred Nunn.

Arrangement note

The Warner Family Genealogical Research Papers are organized in the following series:

- I. Genealogical research files
- II. Family papers

Series descriptions and container list

I. Genealogical Research Papers

The research compiled by Nunn includes a family chart encompassing the Warner, Longstreet, Baker, Shumate, Arrowsmith and other related families. Also included are individual family files, which contain notes, correspondence with institutions and individuals related to genealogical research, and copies of clippings. The research compiled by Leonard W. Warner includes notes tracing the ancestry of the family from 1630 to 1830 and a notebook with copies of documents detailing the Trinity Church land dispute.
