Biographical Note: Alfred Kazin (1915-1998) was an American literary critic, essayist and historian. He was one of the most influential of the prominent New York intellectuals in the second half of the twentieth century, and belonged to the school of writers and thinkers associated with the Partisan Review. Kazin was best-known for his seminal study of American prose literature written between the years 1890-1940, On Native Grounds (1942), as well as three memoirs, A Walker in the City (1951), Starting Out in the Thirties (1965), and New York Jew (1978). Optimistic about the future of American literature, On Native Grounds attempted to demonstrate that the literature of the period was a product of the times, and a reaction against modernism. The book was recognized as a major contribution to American literary criticism, and led to Kazin’s appointment to a variety of prestigious positions: literary editor of The New Republic, and lecturer at Harvard, Smith, Notre Dame, and other academic institutions, and, finally, at the City University of New York (Hunter College and the Graduate Center), where he remained for many years. Other notable works by Kazin include The Inmost Leaf (1955), Contemporaries (1960), An American Procession (1984), A Writer’s America (1988), Our New York (1990), and God and the American Writer (1997). Philip Roth called Kazin “America’s best reader of American literature in this century.” In 1983, Kazin married the writer Judith (Schwartz) Dunford, his fourth wife, who would become the executor of his literary estate.

Scope and Content Note: The archive contains typescripts of Kazin’s essays, books, unpublished biographical sketches, and lectures; more than 75 personal and literary journals; 13 leaves literary notebooks; personal, literary and financial correspondence; two commonplace notebooks; extensive subject and biography research files (including substantial amounts on Herman Melville, the Civil War, Harriet Beecher Stowe, slavery, and African-American literature); examinations and reading lists for undergraduate courses taught by Kazin; research files on a large number of American literary figures; page proofs; and photographs.
