Creator History

Brief Biography

H. D. Thoreau (1817-1862) was born in Concord, Massachusetts where he lived most of his life. There he came to know and be associated with the New England Trancendentalists, a group that included Ralph Waldo Emerson, Bronson Alcott, Margaret Fuller, Jones Very, Elizabeth Peabody and Orestes Brownson.

Describing himself for a questionnaire he filled out on the tenth anniversary of his graduation from Harvard, Thoreau wrote, "I am a Schoolmaster-a private Tutor, a Surveyor-a Gardener, a Farmer-a Painter, I mean a House Painter, a Carpenter, a Mason, a Day-Laborer, a Pencil-Maker, a Glasspaper Maker, a Writer, and sometimes a Poetaster."

In 1845 he moved to Walden Pond where he remained for a little over two years. The simplicity with which he lived allowed him to work only six weeks each year and devote the rest of his time to writing and living. It was during this time that he wrote A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers (1849) and the draft of Walden; Or, Life in the Woods (1854). Some of his writing from this time is in the Berg Collection. A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers was not published until 1849 when he guaranteed to reimburse the publisher for any loss. Of the one thousand copies printed, only two hundred were sold. When the remainder were returned to Thoreau, he wrote in his journal, "I have now a library of nearly nine hundred volumes, over seven hundred of which I wrote myself." Walden, when it was eventually published in 1854, was more warmly received (although it did not go into a second printing until after his death).

In 1846, to demonstrate his opposition to slavery and the U. S. government's legal recognition of it, Thoreau refused to pay his poll tax. His goal was to stay in prison until attention was called to his protest. To his dismay, the tax was paid anonymously and he was released after one night. The experience resulted in the influential book now titled Civil Disobedience.

Henry David Thoreau's writing and life have been claimed as inspiration for a remarkably diverse group of people that includes artists, writers and politicians from many countries and eras. Among them are John Cage, Robert Frost, Ghandi, John F. Kennedy, Jack Kerouac, Sinclair Lewis, Henry Miller, Marcel Proust, Man Ray, Diego Rivera, Robert Louis Stevenson, Gene Tunney, N. C. Wyeth and Frank Lloyd Wright.

Custodial History

This is a "synthetic" collection, created from a number of sources since Thoreau's manuscripts were first dispersed after his sister Sophia's death in 1876. Most of the manuscripts and letters arrived in the Berg Collection in 1941 when the W. T. H. Howe and Owen D. Young collections were acquired. Most of Howe's collection appears to have been bought from the Wakeman (1924) and Bixby (1931) estates, as well as from Houghton Mifflin (1927). A significant acquisition was also made by the Berg when Warren H. Colson's collection was sold in the 1958.

Scope and Content Note

The Berg Collection's manuscript holdings by Henry David Thoreau are varied. They include approximately thirty-five manuscripts and manuscript fragments, journals and a common place book. In addition, there are thirty-two letters to numerous recipients as well as in-coming pieces from over fifty correspondents.

Highlights of the collection include an important portion of the "Ktaadn" section of The Maine Woods; "Nature and Bird Notes," a journal kept by Henry, John and Sophia Thoreau with leaves, grass and wild flowers laid in; and Thoreau's famous letter to his brother addressed to Sachem Hopeful of Hopewell and signed Tahatawan. The Berg also has a daguerreotype of Thoreau ("my friends think [it] is pretty good though better looking than I"), a pencil made by him (his father's company manufactured them), and an original pencil map of Walden Pond.

Other Resources

The Faith in a Seed manuscript, part of the Berg Collection's holdings, has been published in its entirety as Faith in a Seed: The Dispersion of Seeds and Other Late Natural History Writings, edited by Bradley P. Dean (Washington, D.C. & Covelo, CA: Island Press/Shearwater Books, 1993). More recently, Mr. Dean edited Wild Fruits(New York & London: W. W. Norton, 2000), the publication of Thoreau's rediscovered last manuscript which is in the Berg Collection cataloged under "Notes on Fruits."

In addition, The Windhover Press of The University of Iowa and The New York Public Library published Huckleberries(1970), a limited edition publication that draws from Dispersion of Seed and Wild Fruits, two manuscripts at the Berg. One of the editors, Alexander C. Kern, explains in the preface, "Though Thoreau had made no fair copy, he worked out the sequence of his projected text from version to version with carets, numbers, interlineations, marginal notes, and cancel line. Thus despite leaps in the pagination (not Thoreau's own) of the manuscript, there is usually direct evidence for Thoreau's intended sequence…Thus we have an essay entirely in Thoreau's words and almost exactly in the sequence he had planned."

In addition to the Berg Collection, several other repositories hold major collections of Henry David Thoreau's manuscripts. One of them is the Manuscript & Archives Division of The New York Public Library. A list of their holdings follows, with location information given in brackets.

In Howarth (The Literary Manuscripts of Henry David Thoreau. Columbus, Ohio: Ohio State University Press, 1974): D10f, D24b, E12d."All four portions of The Maine Woods are represented by a liberal quantity of surviving manuscript material, mainly early drafts. For 'Ktaadn' the most important document is a notebook formerly owned by Stephen Wakeman and now in the Berg Collection of the New York Public Library. Like Thoreau's other composition books of the mid- to late-1840s, the Berg Collection volume served both as a journal and as a draftbook for books and essays in progress. It has been cannibalized to some extent; of the 269 pages in Thoreau's original numbering, 20 full pages and parts of several others have been scissored out.... The bulk of the book is devoted to the 'Ktaadn' drafts, which begin on page 79 and continue through page 241 with only four internal digressions.... A pencil index to the 'Ktaadn' passages occupies page 242...." Joseph J. Moldenhauer, The Writings of Henry D. The Correspondence of Henry David Thoreau, ed. Walter Harding and Carl Bode (NYC: New York University Press, 1958), 590.
This is probably a rejected first attempt at the letter Harding & Bode refer to, known from sale catalogues and therefore unlikely to be this sheet within the body of the Notes on Fruits. "This letter asked the publishers of a newly organized New York newspaper to include Thoreau's name in their list of lecturers, according to the catalogue of the E. C. Stedman sale (Anderson Galleries, January 24-25, 1911), which listed the manuscript. It was later listed in the catalogue of the John Heise sale (American Art Association, May 6, 1915), with one sentence quoted: 'I should like to have my name included in your list.'" (Correspondence, 590).

Emerson's editors date the note to Nov. 12?, 1838? or Jun. 29, 1840 (Rusk, 2:174), or Jun. 7?, 1841? (Tilton, 7:455-56). Despite the formality of the greeting, "My dear Sir," Tilton gives the reasoning for her later date in the note on vol. 7, 455-56, and Hudspeth follows her in 1:75-76.

DaguerreotypesPortraitsMaxham, B. D. (Benjamin Dexter), 1821-1899 (Photographer)

"Thoreau wrote of this 1856 daguerreotype by Benjamin Maxham: 'my friends think [it] is pretty good though better looking than I.' His friend Horace Hosmer thought it the best likeness of Thoreau he had ever seen. It was made at the request of an admirer apparently unknown to Thoreau, who mailed him $5 in June 1856, with a request for two of his books and a daguerreotype of himself."
