Description Edward Warren Ordway (1864- ), son of Edward and C. Aurora Ordway, was graduated from Harvard College (1887) and Harvard Law School (1890). In 1895 he married Mary C Kingsley and appears to have settled in New York City. From 1899-1904 Ordway served as secretary of the Anti-Imperialist League of New York, an affiliate of the Anti-Imperialist League (of Boston) whose objective was to organize public opposition to American <sup>imperial</sup> policy in the Philippine Islands following the Spanish-American War. In 1904 Ordway dissociated his league from its Boston parent and changed its name to the Philippine Independence Committee. Following the defeat of the Philippine independence movement, Ordway dissolved the Committee and formed in 1905 the Filipino Progress Association of which he was also secretary.

The correspondence is arranged chronologically and is accompanied by an alphabetical index. From 1893 to 1900 the correspondence reflects Ordway's secretaryship of the University Settlement Society and of the Social Reform Club and relates mainly to membership, meetings, and arrangements for lectures. From 1899 to 1907 the correspondence reflects Ordway's secretaryship of the Anti-Imperialist League of New York, the Philippine Independence Committee, and the Filipino Progress Association. The correspondence concerns the recruitment of officers and members, the organization of opposition to the American colonial policy in the Philippine Islands, the suppression of the Filipino independence movement, the policies of the colonial governor, William Howard Taft, the adoption of a plank favoring independence for the Philippines in the platforms of the Republican and Democratic parties in the presidential election of 1904, and relations with the Anti-Imperialist League (of Boston). Some of the correspondence relates to the suppression of the opium trade in the Far East. There are many letters from the league's agent in Manila, David J. Doherty, which report on political, social and economic conditions in the Philippines. Included also are a few minutes of the Filipino Progress Association which are filed
