Summary

Title: The Bell Telephone Hour collection of sound recordings [sound recording]

Date: 1940-1968

Size: 1579 sound discs

Abstract: Weekly 30-minute NBC radio broadcasts, featuring classical and light classical music, which began on Apr. 29, 1940 and continued until 1958. In September, 1959, the Bell Telephone Hour made its television debut as a monthly musical special. It remained a regular television program until April 26, 1968. Library's holdings incomplete. Broadcasts chiefly originated from New York City, sponsored by the Bell Telephone Company (American Telephone and Telegraph). Each 30-minute program generally features a guest singer or instrumentalist, with the Bell Telephone Hour Orchestra, conducted by Donald Voorhees, and the Bell Telephone Hour Chorus. Frequent guest artists include Marian Anderson, Robert Casadesus, Nelson Eddy, Josef Hofmann, Fritz Kreisler, Oscar Levant, James Melton, Grace Moore, Ezio Pinza, Lily Pons, Bidú Sayão, Gladys Swarthout, John Charles Thomas, Helen Traubel, and Eileen Farrell. Chief announcer: Floyd Mack.

Creator History

"One of the great long-running shows of radio, the Bell Telephone Hour consisted of concert music performed by the Bell Telephone Orchestra and various guest artists." The sponsor of the show was the Bell Telephone Company, and ' The Bell Waltz,' (Donald Voorhees, composer), was its theme song. The first broadcast of the Bell Telephone Hour (also known simply as the Telephone Hour) was on Monday, April 29, 1940 at 8 p.m. over the NBC radio network. For the first two years, the show featured regular soloists James Melton and Francia White performing classical and operatic selections with the Bell Telephone Orchestra. On April 27, 1942, the format changed to the "Great Artists series," which featured a "succession of vocal and instrumental artists from opera and the concert stage." This series offered listeners a different famous 'great artist' each week, backed by the Bell Telephone Orchestra directed by Donald Voorhees. This series continued until 1958, during which time listeners were entertained by the talents of artists including Marian Anderson, Helen Traubel, Lily Pons, Jussi Bjoerling, Jascha Heifetz, Fritz Kreisler, Jennie Tourel, and many others. Several times a year, popular performers such as Bing Crosby; Benny Goodman, Nelson Eddy, and Mary Martin appeared. "By 1950, it was linked with The Railroad Hour, The Voice of Firestone, and the NBC Symphony in a solid block of musical programming known as NBC's Monday Night of Music." In September, 1959, the Bell Telephone Hour made its television debut as a monthly musical special. It remained a regular television program until April 1968. Scope and Content Note

The Bell Telephone Hour collection consists of live audio recordings of the weekly radio programs from 1940-1958, as well as the audio portion of the television programs broadcast between 1959 and 1968. The collection is incomplete, but includes recordings of many rehearsals, interviews with performers, and commercials.

Arrangement: The collection is divided into three main series and several sub-series: Radio programs Original series (1940-1942) "Great Artists" series (1942-1958) Television programs (1960-1968) Undated materials

Container List

Radio program 1940-1958.

The shows are arranged chronologically by year, and are subdivided into two sub-series; the original series (items dated from April 29, 1940 to April 13, 1942), and the "Great Artists" series (items dated from May 11, 1942 to June 30, 1958). Each sub-series is then subdivided by year.
