Creator History

The Neighborhood Playhouse was founded as a theater in 1915 by sister philanthropists Alice Lewisohn Crowley (1883-1972) and Irene Lewisohn (1892-1944). Originally intended as a home for the Neighborhood Players, an amateur acting troupe for adults and children, the theater was housed in the Henry Street Settlement House and is considered one of the first to be given the designation "off-Broadway." By 1920 the theater had gone from amateur to professional and gained attention for its avant-garde and experimental work, as well as its popular revue The Grand Street Follies. The theater was under the management of Helen Arthur from 1915 to 1927, and during this time Agnes Morgan was one of the theater's most significant directors.

The theater closed in 1927 but reopened the next year as the Neighborhood Playhouse School of the Theatre. The sisters placed the direction of the school under Rita Wallach Morgenthau, and its first class of nine students was taught by Agnes DeMille, Louis Horst, Laura Elliott, and Martha Graham. In 1935, Sanford Meisner joined the faculty and developed the Meisner technique of acting. The school has an extensive list of alumni, including Robert Duvall, Diane Keaton, Grace Kelley, Gregory Peck, and Sydney Pollack. In 2018 the New York City Council recognized the school with a proclamation honoring its 90th anniversary. Still active, the school is currently located at 340 East 54th Street.

Scope and Content Note

This collection focuses on the early years of the theater and school, with particular attention given to founders the Lewisohn sisters, with some materials that relate to Helen Arthur and Agnes Morgan. Personal correspondence is mostly to and from Irene Lewisohn, with a significant portion of it related to World War II refugee and relief efforts. A selection of the sisters' writings is included, with special emphasis on Alice Lewisohn Crowley's book The Neighborhood Playhouse: Leaves From a Theatre Scrapbook. Administration files for the early days of the Playhouse include meeting minutes, financial records, correspondence, design and construction information, a guest book, and box office tallies. Production information, both for Neighborhood Playhouse and other theaters, includes sheet music, photographs, playbills, rehearsal schedules, illustrations, and related correspondence. Materials related to a 1940 exhibit about the Playhouse at the Museum of Costume Art are also included.
